ABSTRACT

A computing device module for receipt within a computing device chassis includes an enclosure and a handle movably coupled to the enclosure. The handle moves between an extended position and a retracted position. The 5   handle includes at least one opening configured to permit at least one hand digit to extend through the at least one opening when the handle is in the retracted position.